Course Description* This course introduces students to strategic management issues in nonprofit organizations. Nonprofits represent an important sector of the economy that influence the lives of many individuals. In this course, students will learn about the trends and issues affecting the sector as the lines between private, public, and nonprofit organizations continue to evolve. Major topics include: strategic planning, board governance, nonprofit financial management, risk management, resource development, public relations, and impact and accountability measures. The emphasis is on nonprofit organizations in the United States.

This course addresses the unique aspects of management associated with the administration of non-profit organizations. During the past decade, this sector has grown dramatically in size, complexity, influence and impact. An estimated 10% of the workforce is employed in the nonprofit sector and one in three individuals participates as a volunteer in at least one nonprofit organization. This course introduces students to a variety of issues affecting non-profit organizations.

Subject: Fwd: Course in Non-Profit Management

Hi Candace:

I received this from Mary Tolar (Leadership Studies). We will meet to discuss other things in the next week or two but should be clear to proceed with this course.

Begin forwarded message:

Sorry to be unclear, Bill. We are happy for you to move this forward. So please, don't delay!

AND as we think about serving undergraduate students interested in nonprofit studies, we want to be sure we collaborate to connect students both with this course and our program.

Many thanks,
Mary

Hi Candace:

Thanks for your message.

I have reached out to Mary Tolar for comment.

However, I do not see any impact on Leadership Studies. This course would be used as restricted elective for students in the Organizational Management track (Management major) and could be used as an elective for students in the Management Minor once that is in place. Within management, we have several courses that touch on both for-profit and not-for-profit businesses (e.g., Business Ethics) and we graduate students who go to work for non-profits. This course focuses on the administrative and managerial oversight of non-profit organizations but focuses on managerial functions, so I'm not sure where the impact would be. However, I am happy to reach out to Leadership Studies.

Best regards.

Subject: MANGT 450 - Non Profit Management - question about Impact Statement

Good morning Bill,

The Executive Committee of Faculty Senate approved to place MANGT 450 on the June Faculty Senate agenda for final approval; however, it was moved to the discussion agenda because there was a question about whether there was an impact to Leadership Studies.

The impact statement in Curriculog indicated there was no impact to those outside the college of Business, but an FS executive committee member wondered if this may impact the School of Leadership Studies, which was not identified.

If you could let us know whether there is an impact, after double checking, we would appreciate it. Here is the link to the course proposal in Curriculog if you want to refresh your memory on the details:

Thank you! 😊
