

MATTHEW MURPHY- MODERN LANGUAGES AMBASSADOR

Hi, I am Matthew Murphy and I'm a sophomore at K-State majoring in French and Architecture. I chose French because it allowed me to connect with a new community of thoughts and ideas. I'm interested in the arts as an expression of the human condition. Film, Music, Literature, and Architecture can be therapeutic and inspirational. I plan to practice architecture in Europe, connecting with the francophone sphere of design and theory. I'd like to start my own studio with the mission to create powerful public architecture that celebrates community, culture, and well being. The Modern Languages department at K-State has helped tremendously to inform a trajectory for my career and to set actionable plans to achieve my goals through language and design. The professors have emphatically supported my own individual goals, and have even found creative ways to reinterpret their lessons and projects to better align with my intentions for the future.